Learn about International Humanitarian Law (IHL): Free online training for businesses

Companies working in complex environments face challenges in identifying and mitigating risks associated with their business operations and armed conflict.

For company personnel to understand IHL and how to implement it in their operations, the Australian Red Cross has developed free online training modules.

Training modules include "Introduction to Security, Armed Conflict and IHL", through which company personnel can learn the basics of IHL and how it is relevant to business operations. Other modules are tailored to managers and executives or energy and extractive industries.

These practical and concise modules support companies to understand and implement IHL into their operations.
